A STEWARDSHIP MESSAGE

Scarcity or Abundance—What are you looking for? January 2022

A few years ago, I read a fun book by A.J. Jacobs called The Year of Living Biblically: One Man's Quest to Follow the Bible as Literally as Possible. It's important to note that Jacobs, a journalist and author, is Jewish and agnostic. For one year, he tried to follow every biblical "rule" as literally as possible. This includes well-known rules like "Love your neighbor" and the Ten Commandments, as well as lesser-known commands to stone adulterers (which he does by throwing little pebbles at a rather cranky man he meets in a park who brags to Jacobs about an affair he is involved in). Jacobs also decided to follow the biblical instruction to tithe, deciding to give away 10 percent of his income.

After convincing his wife to join him, Jacobs gave the donations away to several charities electronically. He describes his experience this way, "The giving was painful. I mean, 10 percent? That would have an impact on our lives. Vacations would need to be scaled back; new furniture would have to wait. It was huge. When I pressed 'send' on the donations, my palms got wet, my heart rate spiked."

In giving, Jacobs felt the fear that is common to all of us. The fear of not having enough. However, that wasn't all he experienced. He continues:

"It was a pain mixed with pleasure. When the confirmation email pinged in, I felt good. There's a haunting line from the movie Chariots of Fire. It's spoken by Ian Charleson, who plays a deeply religious sprinter in the 1924 Olympics. He says: 'When I run, I feel his pleasure.' And as I gave away money, I think I might have felt God's pleasure. Which is odd. Because I'm agnostic. I don't know if there's a God or not, but still I've felt some high sense of purpose. It was like a cozy ember that started at the back of my neck and slowly spread its warmth through my skull. I felt like I was doing something I should have done all my life."

January 2022

Pastor Jenny Lee, Ph.D.

It's Okay.

"It always protects, always trusts, always hopes, and always perseveres.

Love never fails." (1 Corinthians 13:7-8, NIV)

When the end of the year comes, we may feel that time ran too fast and regret what we didn't achieve this year. Perhaps, many things come to mind: "I should have done it, but I didn't do it;" or "I shouldn't have done it, but I did it again." However, it's okay. You will have a new year, a new day, and a second chance soon because you are beloved. You may say, "Well, I am not loved by anyone." It's okay. God loves you. God chose you. You are a precious child of God. You are a beloved one by God. His love never fails. In his love, you will succeed: You will prosper: You will shine: You will be victorious. The Apostle Paul says, "For I am Convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any powers, neither height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord." (Romans 8:38-39).

During advent season, the Craft Group gathered to learn to knit prayer shawls instead of holding Bible study. Actually, I learned to knit and crochet in high school, but I never made anything by myself. I was not interested in knitting or crochet because I have experienced failing at it several times. I just felt amazed that anyone made it. I thought, 'They must have a different gene.' However, at this time, I decided that I would learn to knit and make a prayer shawl as my form of meditation during the advent season.

The motivation for the Craft Group's gathering to make prayer shawls was because I saw prayer shawls on the hanger mounted on the wall in the Fellowship Hall in Central-Grantsburg Church. Whenever I saw them, I prayed about developing the prayer shawl ministry. I had experienced the miraculous healing power of prayer shawls several times when I was a chaplain in Chicago. Through the ministry of prayer shawls, I saw that many patients got courage, strength, hope, and healing. Also, many knitters grow in faith, wisdom, love, hope, grace, and joy. The prayer shawl is not a simple gift, but it is a mindful, thoughtful, and spirit-filled gift for those who are really in need of prayers and caring or those who need to be blessed. The prayer shawl might be a tangible presence of God, love, and grace. The prayer shawl is a powerful means of grace.

In the first session of the Craft Group Gathering, I learned how to cast, which is the first step in knitting. I felt like it was easy. I started making a prayer shawl. It seemed like it was going well. I felt good, but when I ran out of yarn, I noticed that I had done something wrong because it was wider and shorter than I expected. I felt like I failed and thought, 'see, I couldn't do it. I must have a different gene.' I was about to give it up, and I texted Paulie, an instructor for our Craft Group, saying that my prayer shawl was wider and shorter. She texted me back, saying, "Wow, I am amazed you are done with your yarn so quickly. It could be used for a lap blanket. I'm sure someone would love it." She so encouraged me, and so I was able to finish it. I know it was not perfect, nor the standard shape. But, she said, "It is a perfect lap blanket." And she helped me to finish it. Finally, I completed it with her help. However, her encouragement led me to try making another one. Finally, I made three prayer shawls during Advent, and now I am making a fourth one. I realized that I was not patient in learning something new, and I didn't have a good knitting teacher before. However, I continue to grow in patience and have had a good teacher in this Advent season.

FROM THE PASTOR CONTINUED...

We all make mistakes sometimes. However, a mistake is not failing. There is a saying that "failure is the mother of success." This saying is derived from a quote by Thomas Edison (1847-1931, an American inventor). As you may know, Edison failed numerous times and succeeded numerous times as well. If he didn't experience failure, he might not have become a famous inventor. It is okay to fail because failure is not you. You are still the precious child. You are still beloved by God. Furthermore, His love never fails. In his passion, you will succeed: You will prosper: You will shine: You will be victorious.

Blessings, Pastor Jenny

Frostbite vs Hypothermia

If a person's temperature is below 95° get medical attention immediately.

Frostbite

- A victim is often unaware of frostbite because frozen tissue is numb
- Redness or pain in any skin area may be the first sign of frostbite
- A white or grayish-yellow skin area
- Skin that feels unusually firm or waxy
- Numbness

Source: CDC

Hypothermia

Adults:

- · Exhaustion or feeling very tired
- Shivering
- · Confusion
- Fumbling hands
- Memory loss
- Slurred speech
- Drowsiness

Babies:

- · Bright red, cold skin
- Very low energy

Gratitude and the Witness of Stayers

Let me begin with gratitude. Some psalms begin with gratitude because gratitude is a call to worship, a beacon for new orientation and perspective. I want to thank you for your faithfulness. I am grateful for your focus on the mission while a pandemic rages on. Thank you for putting the Afghan refugees at the center of our table. Thank you for your sacrificial and faithful apportionment dollars and the mission infrastructure we are able to do because we contribute our fair share. I have many miles on my car and I have carried you with me across those miles in prayer and thanksgiving. These days I have been mindful of the witness of those whose mission is at the heart of town and country ministry.

I have been here so long as your bishop, some of you may not remember I was with you as a pastor and district superintendent. I remember with fondness my days in East Troy, and I still remember the road to Crandon. About two months ago after a funeral in Platteville, a rural road compelled me to pull off the well-worn path, and to stay a moment because God had appointed me to a pond that I might sit at the feet of sandhill cranes.

These days are full of the loss of a known world, a feeling of not being at home. For God's people in Babylon, exile was an experience of such a loss and more. Exile is an experience of moral and cultural incongruity. Exile feels like, 'where did the world go?' 'How do I get home?' In his book Resonance, the sociologist Hartmut Rosa writes about how our relationship with the world is problematic. For Rosa, acceleration is the problem. We have an endless compulsion toward escalation for resources, output, and unlimited growth. It leads to a pathological relationship with the world and the environmental crisis, the crisis of democracy, and the psychology of burnout. Ask people if they are happy and they will tell you what they have: health, a job, a family, a second home or boat or an accumulation. Rarely do we talk about peace that is found in terms of relationship with God and neighbor.

East Troy and Crandon know about the loss of a world they knew. For decades, we have watched farms disappear, regardless of the name on the political administration of our public good. Today the term rural conjures notions of loss but not investment. People who live in rural places invest in time and fuel as a part of driving for goods and education, but it is an investment in staying to be in relationship with land, often for generations.

In an essay entitled, The Work of Local Culture, Wendell Berry reminds us, that education no longer serves the local community but a faceless economy that is not bound to a place or a people and does not remember our good is interdependent. Pointedly Berry says, "our children are educated, then, to leave home, not to stay home, and the costs of this education have been far too little acknowledged."

Today I write thinking about what we can learn from the stayers—those who have paid the prices of staying because of the love of farming or a community or a way of life. Perhaps we could learn from the rural church an ethos that knows, 'we're in this together. We are here for each other. Our churchyards make room for graveyards because we need to see both the church and names on the stones as we walk up for worship. When we do, we are reminded of our Sunday school teachers, our soloists, and the hard and common work we share with the Saints who rest from their labors but inspire ours.

One of the major words in the gospel of John is a Greek word we translate, 'abide,' 'stay,' or 'remain.' We are told in the 15th chapter, 'Abide in me, as I abide in you.' Jesus uses the image of the vine and in doing so centers creation, the vine, the vineyard, the land, and the abiding good we are together in Christ. It is time for our pulpits and passions to center the earth and the kind of nesting that would invest in staying because there is no other planet to turn to with our endless patterns of consumption and leaving.

As a denomination, we are trying to be stayers in rural places that other denominations would not value, and yet our rural networks are dry on the vines and clergy rarely stay long enough to learn their craft. We need what the stayers can teach us about Jesus, the one who abides, stays, remains, to the glory of God. I know the cranes offered me an experience of church, of resonance that was healing, and more. It made me give thanks to God for the people of East Troy and Crandon and Plainfield and Iron Creek and Pleasant Prairie. You have touched me with hope. I thank God for your ministry and will ask us all to listen to your witness. Know that I am praying for you.
