A STEWARDSHIP MESSAGE

"Life is good." You may disagree, but "Life is Good" is a registered and trademarked expression by the "Life is Good" people for whom, life is good. The "Life is Good" logo is a stick figure named Jake who wears a black beret, beatnik sunglasses, and flashes a giant grin. Jake is often posed in any number of activities that bring simple pleasures to life — hiking, surfing, flying a kite, walking the dog.

"Life is Good" started inauspiciously as brothers Bert and John Jacobs hawked homemade novelty T-shirts in the Boston streets and door-to-door through the college dorms. They were literally living in their van down by the river. They found their key to success when they printed 48 shirts of Jake over the saying, "Life is Good" for a 1994 street fair in Cambridge. The shirts sold out by noon. People were crazy for the simple and sunny philosophy. So much so, that the sincere and optimistic slogan has grown into an $80 million-a-year merchandise line sold by 5,000 distributors in 14 countries.

One key to the success of "Life is Good" merchandise lies in the interpretation of those who own the products. Someone wearing the kayaking Jake shirt announces both his hobby and the simple pleasure that makes his life good. But cancer sufferers and survivors have also flocked to the merchandise line due to its simple, clear worldview. "Life is Good" is the hopeful battle cry of the cancer afflicted and the celebration song of cancer survivors.

There's an implicit sense of truthfulness to the slogan which preserves its widespread appeal. The Jacobses are quick to note the humility of the assertion — life isn't perfect or great, but it's good. They know there's plenty of bad in the world but find it better to focus on what's good. John claims that the slogan is an affirmation of the here and now. "Don't determine that you're going to be happy when you get the new car or the big promotion or when you meet that special person. You can decide that you're going to be happy today."

In the church, we have a similar saying, but I don't think that it's trademarked. "God is good, all the time. All the time, God is good." This is more than an observation, however. Among other things, it's a promise that our good God is with us and is active in our lives when we are struggling and in the valleys of life and when our hearts are full of the many blessings we have received and we are filled with joy.

Yes, life may be good, but if it is, it's because "God is good . . . all the time."

The Wounded Healer

25 So the other disciples told him [Thomas], "We have seen the Lord." But he said to them, "Unless I see the mark of the nail in his hands and put my finger in the mark of the nails and my hand in his side, I will not believe." 27 Then he [Jesus] said to Thomas, "Put your finger here and see my hands. Reach out your hand and put it in my side. Do not doubt but believe." (John 20:25 & 27)

"Jesus has risen indeed!" We are going through the season of Eastertide after a big celebration of Easter Sunday. We know that Jesus died on the cross for our sins and has risen from the dead. We know Jesus won from the captivity of the oppressor. We know Jesus is the Lord, the Savior, the Healer, the Liberator, the Comforter, etc. But so what? If our mind never changes, our lives never change.

As soon as we are done with the Easter celebration, we bring our problems back into the center of our life again. We may return to our everyday life as Jesus' disciples returned to their hometown after Jesus died on the cross. You shouted and praised the Lord, likely saying "Jesus is risen, indeed!" You may think, "so what?" It is like the people who shouted waving palm leaves, "Hosanna the Highest," had changed their minds quickly and shouted, "Crucify him." It is not only in the scripture story but also in our own stories, like repeating the pattern of jumping from a sinful life up into a graceful life.

Many of you have experienced being wounded directly or indirectly, personally or publicly, physically or emotionally, or by all things together. But, no one has been wounded more than Jesus has been physically, emotionally, and spiritually. In physics, no one doubts that Jesus was wounded on both hands and both feet by nails in addition to being beaten by the whip. Emotionally, Jesus got hurt by being rejected by the people in their hometown, betrayed by his disciples, and many of the people ridiculed him publicly. The Prophet Isaiah says, "He was despised and rejected by others; a man of suffering and acquainted with infirmity; and as one from whom others hide their faces he was despised, and we held him of no account" (Isaiah 53:3).

And, in spirit, Jesus was finally forsaken by God on the cross. Even though it was God's Will, and even though Jesus prayed, "it will be done by your Will," the forsakenness by God must have been his deepest wound. He said to God on the cross, "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?" (Matthew 27:46). Jesus became the Wounded Healer, as Henri J. M. Nouwen wrote in his book, "The Wounded Healer." Even though we get wound in everyday life, we may become the wounded healers through our wounds, as did Jesus.

Nevertheless, we perhaps can see only our wound as if it seems to be more extensive and more profound. And then, we suffer from our deeper wounds everyday, sometimes complaining, "Why me?" "Why is it only me? Everyone else looks happy. Why am I not happy?" You may think, "why do you have family issues; why do you have medical health issues; why do you have relationship issues; why only you?" If you feel that only you are suffering from your wounds, I say, "Please look at your wound from a different perspective." Just pay a little attention to why Jesus had been wounded. Jesus also did nothing wrong, but he was wounded by many. Perhaps, we also add to his wound in everyday life.

I sometimes think that perhaps, God allows us to get wounded so that we may notice God's grace more through our wounds. Jesus understands about our wounds because he had the experience of being wounded. But, what about us? Why could we not understand Jesus' wound even though we have experienced wounds, such as rejection, betrayal, shame, and even physical wounds? The disciple Thomas couldn't believe that Jesus was risen and came to them and even though the other disciples saw Jesus, Thomas wouldn't believe it unless he saw the wounds on his hands and feet for himself. Jesus, who knew Thomas' mind, came to Thomas and showed the wounds on his hands and feet. Finally, Thomas believed in his resurrection. Like this, our wounds, perhaps, are evidence that God loves us, as if Thomas received a special grace through seeing Jesus' wounds directly.

I have experienced many difficulties in life, getting more profound and more significant wounds through the years. However, since I believe in Jesus, my Savior, I can regard my wounds as evidence of God's love. It is like a sign of the child of God. I'm growing in faith stronger through my wounds. As Jesus is the Wounded Healer, I am growing closer to Jesus through my wounds. I hope you also may see your wounds as evidence of God's grace and love. By the grace of God, you may rejoice in your life even though you have wounds. Perhaps you would be a channel of grace as I feel that way.

Blessings,

Pastor Jenny

New Life on the Other Side of the Wounds

Philippians 2:8a: 'He humbled himself....'

Philippians 2:9a: 'Therefore God also highly exalted him.'

None of us wants to be humbled. There is something in us reluctant to experience hurt. We shy away from embarrassment. Most of us avoid looking squarely at our own woundedness. We tell stories to make us seem wiser than we are. Maybe we can acknowledge humanity is frail and broken, but no one wants to be reminded of our own woundedness.

As I traveled the districts on my Days Apart last week, I experienced wonderful hospitality—thank you for your grace toward me. During those days, I mentioned stories I had not told in years. They were stories of difficulty from being under appointment as a clergy person in a community where I was not among the racial majority. Yet, even as humbling as it was, the stories lifted the spirits of those in similar difficulties now. These stories also had people asking deep questions because they had been humbled about their own silence in a world so far from practicing racial justice and equity.

The theologian, Jurgen Moltmann has said that one reason why racial justice has been so slow to achieve is because there is no theology of the oppressor. No one wants to be named by a theology that sees them as the Egyptians or Babylonians or Romans in the stories of oppression in our scripture. Yet, humility is a path to the honest acceptance where grace can bring newness.

Holy Week reminds us that God brings new life to our woundedness. The cycle of our life in Christ is death and resurrection. We can be at peace with our own powerlessness—and accept reality--whatever it is—because God is the bringer of new life. Sometimes the wait between our Good Friday experiences and Easter experiences are excruciating, but we can accept being honest because the one who humbled himself has been exalted.

Follow in the footsteps of Jesus this week. Where are you called to honest appraisal? Where would the Spirit whisper you into transformation? What might your church gain from you if you took the form of a servant? How might God reckon with you more deeply if you were in worship on Thursday and Friday and Sunday? How might we give sacrificially to our mission work in Ukraine and be equally generous with our church?

Life in Christ is not simply skipping from Palm branches to Easter lilies. That would be something short of the truth of our story. Walk with Jesus. Follow. I will prayerfully join you in this journey.

Know that I am praying for you.

Peace,

Hee-Soo Jung, PhD.
